EADA Business School maintains its position in the top 30 business schools in Europe

- The business school cluster in Barcelona retains its podium position as one of the best destinations for management training, alongside Paris and London.
- The Financial Times has published its European business schools ranking with four Spanish schools in the top 30

Barcelona, 5th December 2023. EADA Business School continues to consolidate its privileged position as one of the leading business schools in Europe at number 30, according to the European business schools ranking, published today by the prestigious Financial Times.

This ranking is based on the average of the annual rankings of the different programmes offered by business schools (MBA, EMBA, Master in Management, Open Executive Education and Custom Programmes). It is therefore considered to be the most comprehensive ranking of all those it carries out. To be included in the ranking, the Financial Times requires all institutions to be EQUIS or AACSB accredited.

According to Jordi Díaz, Dean of EADA Business School, "Maintaining this level is a challenge but our strategic commitment is clear: move towards a sustainable future in businesses with trained and committed professionals."

EADA Business School was founded in 1957 as an ideologically and economically independent institution. In addition to appearing in the international rankings of the Financial Times and The Economist, it holds the EQUIS accreditation from the EFMD (European Foundation for Management Development) and AMBA, which recognises the quality of MBA programmes.
