EADA Business School reaffirms its position among the world's top 40 in management training

- The Financial Times has once again recognised the school, placing it 36th globally in this category.
- 97% of master's graduates secure employment within three months of completing the programme.
- Barcelona continues to stand out, with three schools ranked among the world's top 40.

Barcelona, September 8, 2025. EADA Business School's International Master in Management has reaffirmed its standing at 36th in the annual Financial Times global ranking, consolidating its reputation as a benchmark programme in the top 40 worldwide.

"This recognition underscores EADA's commitment to academic excellence and to preparing outstanding global professionals for a highly competitive environment," said Antony Poole, Programme Director. "Our teaching model integrates rigour, diversity and sustainability, combining a strong academic foundation with a practical approach that is essential in today's labour market, which requires not only highly qualified professionals but also a responsible management mindset", emphasizes Poole.

The Financial Times ranking is based on a comprehensive analysis of factors including faculty quality, participant diversity, financial investment, employability, and career progression — in which EADA ranks 13th worldwide. Other indicators include salary outcomes, international reputation, and global mobility, where the school has advanced to 17th place.

EADA's International Master in Management is aimed at recent graduates and young professionals, supporting their entry into the labour market and accelerating career development. A clear reflection of its impact is that 97% of graduates are employed within three months of completing the programme.

The ranking also highlights Barcelona's strength as one of the world's most competitive academic hubs. With three business schools ranked among the global top 40 for this programme, the city stands alongside leading capitals such as Paris and London, further consolidating its reputation as a premier destination for management education.

To be eligible for inclusion in the ranking, schools must hold either EQUIS or AACSB accreditation.

About EADA Business School

EADA Business School Barcelona was founded in 1957 by a group of entrepreneurs and professionals as an ideologically and economically independent institution. Recognized by major international rankings such as the Financial Times, it holds the EQUIS accreditation as well as the AMBA (National Association of Business Administration) accreditation, which recognizes the quality of its MBA programmes.

Over the last decade, the institution has made a firm commitment to sustainability, promoting research and training in this critical area. In 2017, the School created its first programme in business sustainability, the Master in Sustainability and Business Innovation, a pioneer in Spain and Europe. Since then, thanks to the knowledge gained from research and an expert academic team, it has launched five specific programmes in sustainability in business. The Leading What Matters manifesto defines EADA Business School's purpose.
